Pope Prays For Peace At Fatima

FATIMA, Portugal (AP) — Pope Paul VI came to Fatima—a shrine revered by Roman Catholics as the scene of a peace miracle—and prayed Saturday for an end to war, hunger and the stockpiling of arms in a world he said is in danger.

A massive throng knelt before him during an open-air Mass just a few feet from the spot where three shepherd children said the Virgin Mary appeared six times in 1917 and told them to pray for peace at a time when World War I was spilling across Europe.

The Pope then returned to Vatican City a little more than 17 hours after his departure and told a throng of Romans in St. Peter's Square, "The stupendous, magnificent visions of the throng at Fatima assures us that these are the ways of peace—prayer, faith, concord."

As the Pope's plane taxied to take off from the Portuguese airfield of Monte Real for his return to Rome, the nose wheel snagged a bush and the aircraft had to be stopped and the bush pulled free. The Pope was unaware of the incident.

At Fatima, the mighty crush of the congregation caused many pilgrims to faint or fall. The Red Cross reported scores of persons lost consciousness or became ill during the 90-minute ceremony marking the 50th anniversary of the apparition of the Virgin Mary.

Lost Boy's Sock Identified

HANNIBAL, Mo. (AP) — A sock found in a quarry by members of the Mark Twain Emergency Rescue Squad on Saturday has been identified by relatives of one of the three Hannibal boys who disappeared three days ago.

Bill Bridges, vice commander of the squad, said the sock was found by searchers in the vicinity of Murphy's Cave where the boys were last seen.

Bill Dean, a stepbrother of 14-year-old Craig Dowell said the sock is definitely Craig's. "We went home and got one just like it," said Dean. Dowell and Joey Hoag, 13, and Billy Hoag, 11, were last seen entering Murphy's Cave about 4:40 p.m. Wednesday.

Bormann Fingerprints A Mystery

WIESBADEN, Germany (AP) — West German police are uncertain whether they have fingerprints of former Deputy Fuehrer Martin Bormann, a spokesman said today.

He said fingerprints believed to be those of Bormann have been preserved at West Germany's criminal investigation office here, but it had not been determined whether they really belonged to the one-time deputy of Adolf Hitler.

The office has not yet been informed of the arrest of a man in Guatemala in connection with the hunt for Bormann, the spokesman said. He added, that West German authorities are treating the entire matter with extreme caution.

Bormann has been pronounced officially dead by a West German court.

TRUCK DUMPS LOAD NEXT DOOR TO CEMETERY ON WEST SIDE City Has Grown Up Around Old Cemetery In East Denton

Police Seek Dallas Sniper

DALLAS, Tex. (AP)—Police pressed a search Saturday night for a "crazy gunman" whose wild shooting in South Dallas left a woman and child wounded and the neighborhood terrorized.

Taken to Parkland Hospital were Mrs. Mary Ballard, 31, who suffered a bullet wound in the neck, and a small boy, James Louis Arron, 5, who was shot in the leg.

Parkland attendants said both were in fair condition.

Police said the man they were hunting was stabbed in a fight in the same predominantly Negro neighborhood Friday night. He came back Saturday "looking for trouble" and the shooting ensued.

Mrs. Lillie Foster, 63, operator of a four-unit apartment house attempted to keep the man from entering, she said, but fled when he fired a shot at her.

"He said he wanted to see his sister," Mrs. Foster said. "I don't know how many people he shot at, but I heard four or five shots. I ran upstairs and hid."

Mrs. Ballard entered a hallway to see what the commotion was about and one of the gunman's shots hit her. Another wild bullet hit the boy, whom police identified as the gunman's nephew.

As the shooting continued at the usually busy corner, police received a call reporting a sniper shooting at pedestrians on the sidewalk.

"Just a crazy gunman," said a Parkland Hospital attendant.

Officers said the man they were hunting was last seen running from the scene with a small caliber pistol in his hand.

A charge of aggravated assault was filed Saturday against Eddie Lee James, 704 Park Lane, by the Denton Police Department.

According to authorities, James and Levon Emory, 425 Robertson, were involved in an argument at 6:25 p.m. Saturday evening when Emory was cut in the stomach by a switch blade knife.

James received a laceration across the top of his head caused by a brick, authorities said. Emory was taken to Flow Memorial Hospital where he was treated for a deep laceration of his abdomen and released.

James was released on $1,000 bond Saturday evening.

five terms as county judge. For five years, he was attorney for the Katy railroad.

Mayor Ferguson and his wife are buried in Oakwood. His tombstone is broken.

P. C. Withers came through Denton during the Civil War as a member of Quantrell's Raiders. That band of up to 450 Southern guerrilla fighters during the Civil War under William Clarke Quantrell once raided and burned Lawrence, Kan., killing 150 or more persons. Among its members at one time or another were Cole Younger and Frank and Jesse James. It is not known whether Withers made the Lawrence raid or whether he knew the James boys.

At any rate, he liked Denton, so after the war he came back and settled here in 1868. He served the city as tax assessor - collector for 15 years and the county as tax assessor-collector for four years. One of his descendants was an editor of the Dallas News.

A number of members of the Withers family are buried in Oakwood.

Among the other pioneers buried in Oakwood are J. M. McNeil, a businessman and early county clerk; Dr. G. W. Hughes, physician, merchant and city alderman; Lewis M. Fry, who was a sheriff and ran the Denton Hotel; C. C. Scruggs, former county judge; and Steven Hyatt, who had one of the first businesses on the square.

Hiram Cisco deeded the land for the cemetery to the city in the 1850s under the condition that the city take care of it. It thus was the first city cemetery.

The grass is cut and the trees are large and lovely, but industry is pressing in from the north and west and the population is growing to the east and south.

Oakwood is on East Sycamore just east of the downtown area. It has no fence and two footpaths mark an "x" across it. Children ride through on their bicycles and the cemetery is used as a short-cut.

Mrs. Smith, who is interested in preserving Denton's history, thinks a fence should be erected around the cemetery and it should be locked at night. She mapped the cemetery 20 years ago and again recently. Because of the broken and moved markers, she found that a large number of graves are now lost. New graves have been placed over old graves, she contends.

through the left temple with a 22 cal. bullet.

Sheriff Barnes said the man told him that the gun went off accidentally when Sontag tried to grab it from his hand.

Barnes said after the shooting the man brought Sontag's body in the car to the Sheriff's Department to turn himself in but when he found that Barnes was not there, he panicked and buried the body in the dump ground.

The man in jail had formerly been convicted of burglary and served time in the penitentiary, Sheriff Barnes said.

Sontag's body was taken to Schmitz-Floyd-Hamlett Funeral Home but is to be transferred to Snyder-Young Funeral Home in Carrollton.

7 MIGs Downed As Pilots Avenge 1 Lost Phantom

Ground War Continues Near Zone

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. Air Force jet pilots destroyed seven Communist MIGs in dogfighting over North Vietnam on Saturday — equalling the war's record set Jan. 2 — and probably destroyed two others, spokesmen announced.

With vengeance as a spur, Phantom and Thunderchief squadrons based in Thailand ripped purposefully into the Soviet-designed North Vietnamese fighters 24 hours after one of their number, an F4C Phantom, was shot down by a MIG17.

The Phantom, one of three American planes lost in raids Friday in the Hanoi area, was the 16th reputed to have fallen in Vietnam under MIG fire. The American list of enemy planes destroyed in combat soared with Saturday's action to 56.

Eight other MIGs have been reported destroyed and from four to six probably destroyed or damaged a ground since MIG bases were added by Washington order in April to the list of authorized targets.

The strength of North Vietnam's air force, estimated recently at about 120 planes, obviously has been cut. In the past, however, imports apparently have made up the losses.

While the air blows held the spotlight, U.S. soldiers and Marines waged separate battles against three Communist detachments found in a great arc below the border demilitarized zone.

American and North Vietnamese artillery duelled again across the demilitarized zone, a sector of prime concern to allied authorities now that abatement of the northeast monsoon means drying of trails which Hanoi regulars could use for a mass invasion attempt.

In the areas of close-quarter contact:

The 1st Battalion, U.S. 9th Marine Regiment, squared off with tank support in a three-hour battle against North Vietnamese regulars encountered about three miles south of the demilitarized zone in the Con Thien sector. Both sides dug in at dusk. One of the Marines' 12-man squads was severely mauled at one point in the fight. There was no specific accounting of casualties.

On a ridge about 100 miles south of the border in Quang Nam Province, 400 Marines sought to root an enemy force of undetermined size from jungle-screened bunkers. The fight started with shooting from the bunkers when the Leathernecks pushed into that area Friday. A field dispatch said 15 of the enemy were known dead.

ROAD CHECK

Cycle Doctor Has Far-Off Fan Club

"When you pass through Texas, see Leon Pratt — he's a good man."

Pratt, who runs the Denton Cycle Center, was unaware of his international reputation as a motorcycle doctor until he came across George O'Connell and Jim Davison, both of Montreal, and Ken Sunderman of San Francisco.

The three are avid motorcyclists, although they refuse to display the unfairly expected traits — like long hair and maitresse crosses combined with a surly attitude.

"We're on a holiday, nothing more," points out O'Connell, a construction engineer.

The three crossed paths in Denton to seek out Pratt, whose prowess is passing along a "grapevine" connecting motorcyclists everywhere.

"When one of us hears about a man who's good, we pass the word along. We keep informed that way," notes Davison.

O'Connell and Davison are en route to the west coast by way of Florida. Sunderman is on his way to Montreal by way of Florida. Their routes are identical, although the directions are reversed.

The travelers are impressed with the Americans, especially the Western folk. "It seems the further west we go, the better people get. They run out to greet you here. In the East it's quite a bit different," commented O'Connell.

What's the biggest hazard for long-distance motorcycle travelers? "Automobiles," they answer, practically in unison. "Motorists just don't seem to recognize us. I've been forced off the road a couple of times," Davison notes.

The trio will spend the night in Denton, then part company. They'll have nice memories of Texas, except maybe O'Connell. The hefty cyclist combed Denton stores, but was unable to find a large enough pair of pants to fit him. "In Texas, I thought big clothes would be no problem," O'Connell says . . . but he's grinning when he says it. — Tom DeCola
